

Angus Productions Inc.'s coverage of the

Trailblazer Honoree Recognized

News release provided by the BEEF Magazine.

---

Jackie Moore was recognized as the nation's most visible commercial champion of calf-management programs designed to improve calf health and value.

---

(DENVER, CO, Feb. 3, 2006) — Jackie Moore, co-owner of Joplin Regional Stockyards, in Carthage, Mo., was presented BEEF magazine's 2005 Trailblazer Award during the 2006 Cattle Industry Annual Convention in Denver.

The Trailblazer Award is presented annually by BEEF magazine editorial staff to an individual whose industry contributions and farsighted leadership have been instrumental in pushing forward significant research, programs or projects that benefited the industry and improved the production and profit environment for U.S. beef producers.

Moore was lauded for his years of progressive innovation and leadership in the livestock-auction facility he co-owns with brother-in-law, Steve Owens.

Particularly in the past decade, Moore has been the nation's most visible commercial champion of calf-management programs designed to improve calf health and value, said BEEF Senior Editor Clint Peck. In the process, he's proved on a real-world stage that quality-based calf programs are not only more humane but more profitable for the producer.

Moore was profiled in the November 2005 issue of BEEF magazine. For more information visit www.beefmag.com.

Editor's Note This release is adapted from a news release distributed by the BEEF magazine. For more information, visit www.beefmag.com.